VERBANK — Standing on Tim and Grace Gay's front lawn during the holiday season is like being at a U2 concert.

From blocks away, the 346,283 multicolored lights, synchronized to 154 songs, can be seen flashing across the sky.

"It's breathtaking," said Toni Fullard, Grace Gay's friend since sixth grade. "Every year it gets better. You have to see it in real life to get the real color and the real life of it."

The ERDAJT Holiday Light Display, named after the first and middle initials of their three children, has grown immensely from 600 lights in 1995, the year their first child, Emily, was born. The lights dart between elements and rise and fall with the flow of the music. As the sky darkens, the lights radiate through the sky with greater illumination.

"It's spectacular, it's gorgeous, it's out of this world," Union Vale Supervisor Lisette Hitsman said.
